ROBOT BOY

5 Can you imagine a “toy” robot that can talk and play with children? That is exactly what David Hanson invented in his laboratory in Texas, U.S.A. He and his company, Hanson Robotics, came up with the idea of a robot boy in 2002. It took them more than 5 years to develop their invention and they are improving it all the time. Hanson gave his robot the same name as his own son, who was born in 2006. They are both called Zeno

Zeno the robot looks like a young boy. It weighs 3 kilos and is 43 centimeters tall. It can open and close its eyes and mouth, smile, lie down, stand up and do other simple movements. Its face shows what it is feeling. Zeno can even follow peoples’ eyes around !the room with its own eyes so that it looks like Zeno is listening

10 Hanson is still trying to improve the robot – the way it walks, talks and moves its body. Children will be thrilled at the amazing things it can do. And there seems to be no limit to what Zeno will be able to do. Zeno will “recognize” faces because it has a camera behind its eyes, and it will be able to call people by their names. Zeno will cry that it is tired .when its battery is nearly empty

15 Hanson believes that his toy will get smarter and smarter – so that it will be like a real friend to young children. He doesn’t want it to be too expensive so that many children .will be able to have one
